Protection Of Game Supply

Wild Manoeuvres In North
The protection of the game supply of the Northwest Territories has been a special consideration by the Department of Northern Development.

Particular attention has been given to the protection of the caribou, moose, muskox, and reindeer, which are the main sources of food for the natives. The caribou is particularly important, as it is the main source of food for the natives in the winter. The Department has been working to protect the caribou supply by establishing game reserves and by controlling the hunting of caribou.

The Department has also been working to protect the game supply by establishing game reserves and by controlling the hunting of game. The Department has been working to protect the game supply by establishing game reserves and by controlling the hunting of game.
